

After years of jungle warfare Travis Monroe is now a battle hardened Marine. Yet still is a naive young man when it comes to the opposite sex. Once a hand to hand combat student of the C.I.A. he now instructs his old instructors while waiting to go back into the field to do his part in the war against communism. But first he has to complete another mission to covertly travel to the border between China and North Vietnam to destroy a shipment of rockets destined to down American aircraft. A slip in security, leads to an allegation of him being a spy in the countries of North Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and China immediately followed by a bounty placed on his head. He is forced to leave the combat theater for the next six months in a remote part of Germany before finally being recalled to Saigon to resume his original mission to hopefully shorten the war. Once he is ready to spring the trap on the enemy's rainy season encampment all he has to do is wait for the camp to fill with enemy soldiers and be given the approval to blow it up. Suddenly he is called away on a rescue mission to a downed chopper only to discover someone in his own government wants the Army nurse assassinated. This nurse must put aside her feelings of resentment for him when he is attacked by a tiger and is with him as he completes his mission. As the two Americans travel through hundreds of miles of enemy territory they finally link up with a lost Army patrol that is sitting in a trap created by the enemy. After quietly getting the patrol out of the trap they manage to travel to the firebase Zebra 29 only to find out the firebase is surrounded by an enemy that is determined to wipe it out. Travis must take the fight to the enemy to keep the firebase from falling then before the final assault he leads the strike team and engages the enemy in hand to hand combat until the battle is over.
